top 10 travel tips

- 1 Check the latest travel advice at smartraveller.gov.au and subscribe to receive free email notifications each time the advice for your destination is updated.
- 2 Take out comprehensive travel insurance and ensure it covers you for the destinations you plan to visit and the activities you plan to participate in.
- 3 Before travelling overseas register your travel and contact details online at smartraveller.gov.au, or at the local Australian embassy, high commission or consulate once you arrive so we can contact you in case of an emergency.
- 4 Obey the laws of the country you're visiting even if these appear harsh or unfair by Australian standards. Don't expect to be treated differently to the locals just because you're Australian.
- 5 Make sure you have the right visas for the countries you are visiting or transiting. Remember that a visa doesn't guarantee entry.
- 6 Make copies of your passport details, insurance policy, travellers cheques, visas and credit-card numbers. Carry one copy in a separate place to the originals and leave a copy with someone at home.
- 7 Check with health professionals for information on recommended vaccinations and other health precautions. Also find out about taking medication overseas – certain medicines aren't allowed in some countries.
- 8 Make sure your passport has at least six months validity from your planned date of return to Australia. Carry extra passport photos just in case your passport is lost or stolen and you need to replace it while away.
- 9 Keep in contact with friends and family back home and give them a copy of your itinerary so they know where you are.
- 10 Check to see if you're regarded as a national of the country you plan to visit, and whether dual nationality will have any implications for your travel plans.

smartraveller.gov.au

To help Australians avoid difficulties overseas, the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT) has travel advice for over 160 destinations on its website at smartraveller.gov.au. The site has information on the risks you might face while travelling and other useful advice on a wide range of topics to help you make informed decisions about when and where to travel. You'll also find:

- contact details for DFAT's 24-hour Consular Emergency Centre, Australian overseas posts (embassies, high commissions and consulates), and foreign diplomatic missions in Australia.
- all of DFAT's consular brochures.

It's important to be well-informed about the destination you're travelling to so you don't unwittingly get into strife.

// TRAVEL ADVICE

The travel advice on smartraveller.gov.au contains important destination-specific information that you need to know when planning an overseas trip. There's useful advice on local laws, entry and exit requirements and health issues and an indicative rating of the security situation of that country. Its aim is to help you determine at a glance the level of risk in travelling to a particular destination. However, it's a good idea to also consider the other travel information on smartraveller.gov.au before you go. Remember the security situation can change quickly so check the travel advice regularly while you're away or subscribe to get email updates.

// ONLINE REGISTRATION

Register your travel details online at smartraveller.gov.au, or at the nearest Australian embassy, high commission or consulate once you arrive, so that we can try to contact you in case of an emergency, be it a natural disaster, civil disturbance or a family issue. If you are travelling in a large group, call 1300 555 135 before you go to organise a group registration form. All registration information is protected by Australia's strict privacy laws.

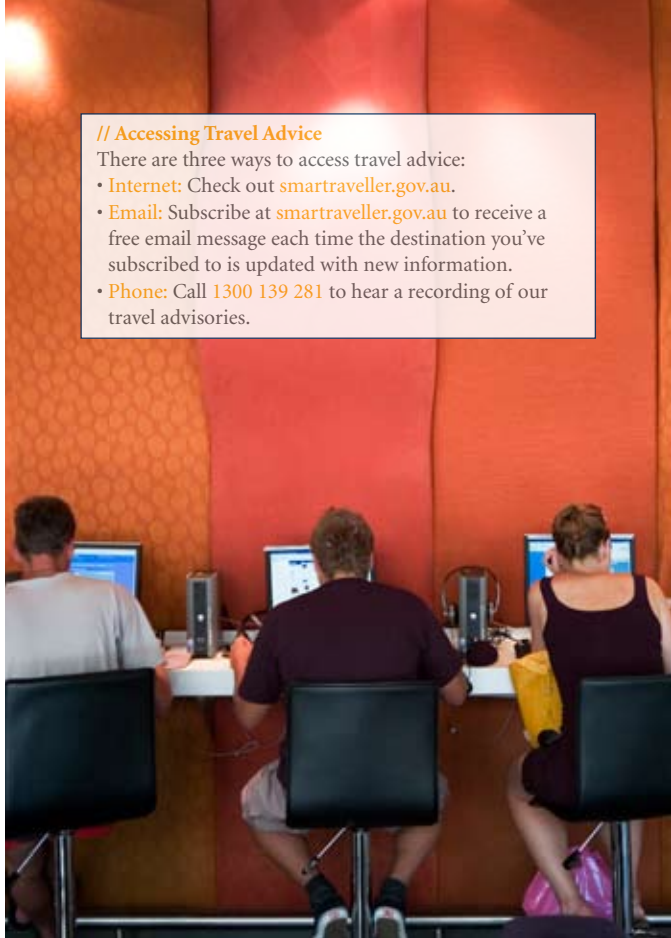

// TRAVEL INSURANCE

If you can't afford travel insurance, you can't afford to travel. That might sound a bit harsh, but organising insurance is an essential part of preparing for your overseas trip because if you're uninsured you (or your family) are personally liable for covering

// Accessing Travel Advice

There are three ways to access travel advice:

- Internet: Check out smartraveller.gov.au.
- Email: Subscribe at smartraveller.gov.au to receive a free email message each time the destination you've subscribed to is updated with new information.
- Phone: Call 1300 139 281 to hear a recording of our travel advisories.

any medical or other costs resulting from unexpected incidents or accidents.

Comprehensive Travel Insurance

Comprehensive travel insurance should cover all medical expenses for injury or illness, as well as theft of your valuables and cancellations or interruptions to your flight plans, baggage damage and more. It also saves you the worry and financial burden if you have an accident or illness overseas – medical costs can be in the tens of thousands of dollars and many families have been burnt financially in paying these costs.

Shop around, including online, to find the policy that best suits your individual needs:

- Check the policy's exclusions including how it deals with pre-existing illnesses.

- Make sure your insurance covers you for the full length of your time away and all the destinations you plan to visit.

- Be aware that some policies do not cover refunds for changes in safety and security environments overseas. Whether you are entitled to a refund when DFAT changes travel advice levels will depend upon the terms and conditions of your policy – it varies from policy to policy. Always read the fine print!

For more tips and information on insurance and how to choose the right policy for you, visit the Travel Insurance pages at smartraveller.gov.au.

// OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS

You might just want to jump on a plane and get moving, but it's important that all your documentation is in order. Find out what you need in advance as some documents can take a while to organise.

Passport

Your passport is your most important travel document. You need it to leave and enter Australia and other countries, obtain visas, cash travellers cheques, and in some countries you must carry it at all times as a form of identification.

- Check that your passport has at least six months validity from your planned date of return to Australia.

- Safeguard your passport at all times. Aside from the inconvenience of having to replace a lost, stolen or damaged passport, an additional fee will apply to obtain a replacement. A replacement passport may also have limited validity.

- Report the loss or theft of your passport to the nearest Australian embassy, high commission or consulate, or online at www.passports.gov.au, without delay. This is required by law.

- If your passport has been damaged in any way, including any problems with the electronic chip, before your next trip, telephone the Australian Passport Information Service (APIS) on 131 232 or visit your nearest passport office or Australian diplomatic or consular mission to check whether your passport is usable for international travel.

- Write your personal details at the back of your passport in pencil so that they're easy to change. Apart from this, it is illegal to alter or tamper with your passport in any way.

- Always carry your passport separately to other forms of identification. This will ensure you will have alternative 'proof of identity' documents if your passport is lost or stolen.

More information on passports can be found at www.passports.gov.au or by calling APIS on 131 232 (in Australia). If you are out of the country and need passport information, contact the nearest Australian embassy, high commission or consulate.

Visas

Find out early which visas you need by contacting the nearest embassy, high commission or consulate of the country you wish to visit. Their contact details can be found in the White Pages or online at smartraveller.gov.au. You should also discuss visa requirements with your travel agent.

A visa does not necessarily guarantee you entry to a country, particularly if authorities suspect you intend to contravene the conditions upon which the visa was issued.

Entry Permits

When you enter some countries, you receive an entry permit that tells you the date when you must exit. If you want to stay longer you must apply for an extension. Be aware that visa-free schemes may not permit extensions and if you overstay you could be fined or jailed.

Drivers Licence

Don't assume you can use your Australian licence overseas. You can get an international driving permit from the auto club or association in the state or territory where your licence is current. See smartraveller.gov.au/tips/int_driving_licence.html.

// PERSONAL INFORMATION

Make two photocopies of the following documents and leave one copy at home with your family and the other in a safe place while you're travelling, separate from the originals:

- passport
- itinerary and tickets
- visas
- travellers cheques and credit-card numbers
- drivers licence or international driving permit
- insurance policy.

// DUAL NATIONALITY

If you or your parents were born in another country, you may be regarded as a citizen or national of that country, even though you are an Australian citizen and may never have travelled outside Australia. It is worth noting that Australia recognises dual citizenship.

Some countries offer citizenship to people who marry their citizens, or to persons whose grandparents were born in that country. Before you depart, it is important to know about the implications of local laws for dual nationals, eg you may be liable for military service in the country of your other nationality.

A country may not permit Australian consular assistance to be given to Australian citizens who, according to its laws, are considered to be its own nationals. Some countries may not recognise your Australian citizenship unless you are travelling on an Australian passport.

You must use your Australian passport to leave and return to Australia.

If you hold another country's passport, seek advice about using it from the country's embassy before you depart. For information on the effect of dual nationality and Australian citizenship, call the Citizenship Information Line on 131 880. For further information view or order a copy of the brochure Travel information for Dual Nationals online at smartraveller.gov.au.

// TRAVEL HEALTH

Standards of medical care overseas may be very different to those in Australia. Medical treatment may be very costly and you may have to pay in advance. In some cases medical evacuation may be necessary, costing in the thousands of dollars.

Organising comprehensive travel insurance before you depart can save you the worry of unexpected medical costs.

In some countries, HIV/

AIDS is a significant risk. You should exercise appropriate precautions if engaging in activities that expose you to risk of infection.

You can find more information about taking care of your health overseas:

- on the Department of Health and Ageing (DoHA) website at www.health.gov.au
- on the World Health Organisation website www.who.int/ith
- in DFAT's Travelling Well brochure.

If you require medical assistance while overseas, the local Australian embassy, high commission or consulate will be able to supply you with a list of English-speaking doctors.

Vaccinations

Visit your doctor at least six to eight weeks before you depart and discuss the destinations you plan to visit, the medications you should take with you and any vaccinations you should have before you go.

Medications

Before leaving home, check that the medications you plan to take are legal in the country you are visiting. You can do this by contacting the embassy, consulate or high commission located in Australia for the country you plan to visit; details are at www.dfat.gov.au. Make sure you do this in plenty of time to receive a response.

It's an offence to carry or send Pharmaceutical Benefits Scheme (PBS) medicine overseas unless it is for your own personal use, or for the use of someone travelling with you. If you are taking medications overseas, carry them in their original, clearly labelled containers.

A signed and dated letter from your doctor describing all medical conditions and medications, including generic names, is also a good idea. If carrying syringes or needles, be sure to have a doctor's letter documenting their medical necessity.

More information on travelling with medicines is available from Medicare Australia at www.medicareaustralia.gov.au, or call 132 011.

Reciprocal Health Care Agreements

Australia has health care agreements with Belgium, Finland, Italy, Malta, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Republic of Ireland, Sweden, and the UK. Under these agreements, Australians can be provided with urgent or emergency medical treatment overseas. However, general medical services are only provided when the need for treatment arises during the visit and it would be unreasonable to delay treatment until the individual's return to Australia.

These agreements are no substitute for travel insurance. They will not cover you if a doctor recommends you should be evacuated back to Australia. You would need to cover these costs if you do not have adequate travel insurance.

More information can be found at www.medicareaustralia.gov.au or by calling 132 011.

Influenza

Since 2003 there have been outbreaks of various strains of influenza (including H5N1 and H1N1) in a number of countries around the world. Information, including precautionary advice for travellers, during these types of outbreaks is generally available on the following websites:

- Department of Health and Ageing – www.health.gov.au
- World Health Organisation – www.who.int/ith
- DFAT – Pandemic (H1N1) 2009 travel bulletin at smartraveller.gov.au

// TRAVEL MONEY

There is no limit to the amount of currency you can bring in or out of Australia. However, you must declare amounts of $10,000 or more in Australian currency or foreign equivalent. If asked by a Customs and Border Protection officer you must also complete a Bearer Negotiable Instruments form if you're carrying promissory notes, travellers cheques, personal cheques, money orders or postal orders.

For further information, visit www.austrac.gov.au.

// PACKING TIPS

Packing tips and information on items that can be included in carry-on and stowed luggage is available through your airline and the Australian Civil Aviation Safety Authority's website at www.casa.gov.au/airsafe/trip/packing.htm.

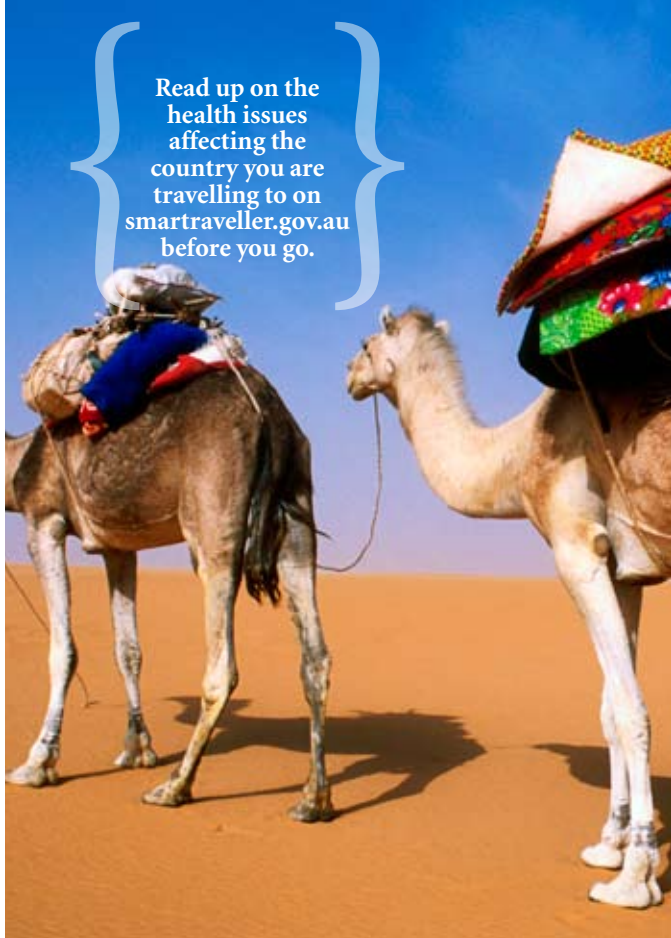

If you're unsure about what you can take with you overseas, download the Australian Customs and Border Protection Service's brochure Guide for Travellers – know before you go from www.customs.gov.au, or call the Customs Information and Support Centre on 1300 363 263.

When travelling, always remember:

- Obey the law – don't purchase, use or travel with drugs.

- Pack your luggage yourself – tales of tourists having drugs planted on them are not uncommon.
- Secure your luggage as a sensible precaution against tampering or theft.
- Don't leave your bags unattended in public areas or with a stranger.
- Never carry anything into or out of another country for someone else.

on the road

Nothing beats the excitement of jumping on a plane to explore a new destination or to rediscover an old one. Australians love to travel, and as a nation we're doing it more and more. You'll find Australians in almost every corner of the globe, making new friends, enjoying unique experiences and absorbing themselves in another country's culture.

Register your travel and contact details online at

in an emergency.

// KEEPING IN TOUCH

Every year, DFAT's consular service receives thousands of calls from worried family members and friends who haven't heard from someone who is travelling. Follow these tips so that your friends and family can have a worry-free time, too:

- Leave a copy of your itinerary with your family.
- Register your travel plans at smartraveller.gov.au or do it in person at any Australian embassy, high commission or consulate.
- Arrange options for staying in touch with family while overseas (mobile phone, prepaid or postpaid international calling card, SMS, email etc).
- Give your family an indication of how often they will hear from you, and stick to your word.

// THE LAW

When it comes to the law, pleading ignorance is no defence. Always obey the laws of the country you are visiting, even if they are different to those in Australia. In some cases you may be bound by Australian laws as well.

Check out the local-laws section in the country-specific travel advisories at smartraveller.gov.au before you go.

// DRUGS

Don't use, carry or get involved with drugs overseas. Every year, the Australian Government provides consular assistance to Australians arrested or jailed overseas for drug offences. Consular assistance cannot override local law, even where local laws appear harsh by Australian standards. Some countries, such as Indonesia, Malaysia Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam impose the death penalty or life imprisonment.

// CHILD SEX CRIME

Australia has introduced laws with lengthy jail terms for Australian citizens and residents who engage in sexual activity with children in foreign countries (see DFAT's travel bulletin at www.smarttraveller.gov.au/zw-cgi/view/TravelBulletins/Helping_to_Fight_Child_Sex_Crimes_Abroad). Violations of Australia's child sex laws should be reported to the Australian Federal Police hotline on 1800 813 784, or by writing to the Australian Federal Police Operations Coordination Centre, GPO Box 401, Canberra ACT 2601, Australia.

// CONSULAR SERVICES AND THE LAW

Some Australian criminal laws, such as those relating to money laundering, bribery of foreign public officials, terrorism and child sex tourism, apply to Australians overseas. The provision of consular assistance to Australians does not extend to protecting the client from the consequences of actions that are prohibited under Australian law or the laws of the country you are visiting. Consular officials have a responsibility to report serious criminal misconduct of this kind to the Australian Federal Police.

Regardless of the country you are visiting, be aware that local laws and penalties, including ones that appear harsh by Australian standards, do apply to you. If you are arrested or jailed, we can't get you out of trouble or out of jail. See the Consular Services section of this booklet for more information on what the Government can and can't do for you.

// LOCAL CUSTOMS

It's important to respect local cultures when travelling. Here are a few tips to assist you:

- Be aware of the customs of the country you're travelling to.
- Dress appropriately. Look at what the locals are wearing and be sensitive to local standards, particularly in those countries with strong Islamic customs.
- Be respectful of places of worship, such as churches, mosques or temples.
- Always ask permission before taking photos of people and respect their wishes if they decline. Note that in some countries it is illegal to take photographs of certain places, including government buildings, airports and ports or anything that may be a police or military property.

• Be aware that in some countries it's not acceptable for couples to be overtly affectionate in public, so be discreet.

// FAMILY MATTERS Birth

If you wish your child born overseas to be recognised as an Australian citizen and travel on an Australian passport you must register them as a citizen by descent. For information on registering a child by descent go to www.citizenship.gov.au.

Marriage

Many Australians choose to get married overseas.

If you're planning on doing this be aware that laws regarding marriage vary from country to country and legal complications can arise. Make sure you check out the legal, cultural and religious implications for yourself, your partner and any current or future children.

Anyone intending to marry overseas should contact either a legal practitioner or the embassy or consulate of the country in which they would like to marry for details on the requirements that must be met.

Death

Each year over 700 Australians die overseas. The cost of bringing the remains of loved ones home can be between $10,000 and $20,000. Make sure your travel insurance covers this before you go. For more information, obtain a copy of the brochure Death Overseas, available from smartraveller.gov.au.

// OTHER INFORMATION

DFAT has a range of brochures with travel hints for specific travel groups available at smartraveller.gov.au.

Titles include:

- Backpacking Overseas
- Living and Working Overseas
- Travelling Dual Nationals
- Travelling Parents
- Travelling Seniors
- Travelling Well
- Travelling Women
- Travelling with Children.

what you can and can't bring back

Depending upon the type of trip you've had, coming home can either be a relief or have you reaching for the tissue box.

// RETURNING TO AUSTRALIA

Guide for Travellers – know before you go is a guide for international travellers to familiarise themselves with Australia's prohibited and restricted goods laws and personal duty-free concessions.

Tax Back for Travellers provides information on how you can claim a refund under the Tourist Refund Scheme for the goods and services tax (GST) and wine equalisation tax (WET) that you pay on goods you buy in Australia and take overseas.

Both brochures are available at www.customs.gov.au, or you can call +61 2 6275 6666 from overseas or 1300 363 263 from within Australia; alternatively email information@customs.gov.au.

Some Australian and New Zealand ePassport holders

now have the option to self process through passport control using SmartGate. This is a simple, two-step process that performs the customs and immigration checks usually conducted by a Customs and Border Protection officer. To use SmartGate, travellers must be aged 18 years or over and have completed their Incoming Passenger Card (IPC). To see how SmartGate works or for more information visit www.australia.gov.au/smartgate.

// QUARANTINE ITEMS

Australia has very strict quarantine laws to help minimise the risk of exotic pests and diseases entering the country. Bringing back food or items made from animals or plants could have a devastating effect on Australia's agricultural industries and unique environment. Examples of potentially damaging items include plant cuttings, seeds and nuts, and anything made from wood, plant or animal material including meat and poultry products.

On arrival back into Australia, your baggage may be X-rayed, inspected by quarantine officers or checked by a detector dog team. You must declare all quarantine items on your Incoming Passenger Card. In signing the IPC, you are making a legal declaration, and failure to answer all questions truthfully can have serious consequences.

For more information, read the Australian Quarantine and Inspection Service (AQIS) brochure What Can't I Take Into Australia?, call AQIS on 1800 020 504 or visit its website at www.aqis.gov.au.

getting help overseas

If you find yourself in trouble, contact the consular service at the nearest Australian diplomatic post. In some countries, Canadian posts can also help Australians. This information is listed in the Directory of Australian Overseas Missions and Representations section of this booklet.

// CONSULAR SERVICES

The Australian Government will do its best to help Australians in difficulty overseas, but it pays to be realistic in your expectation of what we can and can't do. When you travel you should be aware that you're leaving behind Australia's support systems, emergency service capabilities and medical facilities and there are limits on the level of consular service that we are able to provide in other countries.

We can help with:

- Providing help during crises such as civil unrest and natural disasters.
- Providing advice and support in the case of an accident, serious illness or death, or if an Australian is a victim of a serious crime, and arranging for next-of-kin to be informed.
- Visiting or contacting

Australians who are arrested and arranging for their family to be informed (if they wish).

- Contacting relatives and friends on an Australian's behalf and asking them to assist with money or tickets.
- Providing access to a fully repayable loan (up to a maximum of $150) in real emergencies to cover the cost of a replacement travel document.
- Providing information on possible government financial assistance for eligible Australians to help with legal costs overseas.
- Providing a list of doctors, lawyers and, if available, interpreters.
- Issuing passports, including emergency passports.

We cannot help with:

- Giving legal advice, investigating crimes overseas or intervening in court proceedings.

- Getting Australians out of prison or obtaining special treatment for Australians in prison.
- Providing medical services or medication.
- Arranging visas or work or residence permits for other countries or helping Australians obtain them.
- Paying or guaranteeing payment of hotel, medical or other bills.
- Acting as a travel agent, bank or post office, or storing luggage.
- Providing translation, interpreter, telephone or photocopy services.
- Becoming involved in commercial disputes or taking complaints about local purchases.

// YOUR PRIVACY

If you need the help of consular officials while overseas, you should be aware that your rights to privacy are protected by the Privacy Act 1988. Information about you cannot be disclosed without your consent, even to your immediate family or friends, except in certain limited circumstances.

// FEES

By law the consular service must charge fees for notarial and certain other services. These fees are determined by an Act of Parliament and do not reflect the full cost of providing consular services.

// EMERGENCY SERVICES

DFAT's Consular Emergency Centre provides urgent consular assistance around the clock to Australians in distress overseas. The centre's staff are highly experienced officers who can be contacted on 1300 555 135 within Australia, or on +61 2 6261 3305 from overseas. This service is provided where the problem is serious and requires emergency assistance, and you can't contact the closest Australian embassy, high commission or consulate.

// USEFUL CONTACTS

DFAT can be contacted on the following telephone numbers:

- Australian Consular Services 1300 555 135 (from within Australia) or +61 2 6261 3305 (from overseas)
- Australian Passport Information Service 131 232 (from within Australia) and +61 131 232 (from overseas).

// DIRECTORY OF AUSTRALIAN OVERSEAS MISSIONS AND REPRESENTATIONS

Consular officers are present in Australian diplomatic and consular posts abroad: those marked with an asterisk are honorary consuls. If a country has no Australian diplomatic or consular post, the directory refers you to the nearest post that has responsibility for that country, as well as to Canadian and other posts that give consular assistance to Australians in that country. Stay aware of contact detail changes by visiting smartraveller.gov.au.
